Reminders to All Children

As a child, it is important for you to understand the potential dangers that can occur at home and be prepared to prevent accidents from happening. One common accident that can occur at home is a fall. Many accidents happen when you trip over toys. To prevent falls, it is important for you to keep walkways clear of toys. Remember to keep all the toys in a box and not leave them lying around the house. Poisoning is another potential accident that can occur at home. To prevent poisoning, it is important for you to stay away and not play with household chemicals, medications and other toxic substances. Fire is another accident that is often caused by children. Many of the fires caused by children are accidental, often because they lack the understanding about fire safety. It is important that you know about the danger of playing with matches or lighters. You should not use matches, lighters and candles as toys.

10. To prevent accidents from happening, you need to _____.

- A. make sure that dangers always happen at home
